I wonder why deer have antlers...

Antlers are used for defence. Antlers are bone growths from the heads of most male deer and some female deer. The only male deer without antlers are the Chinese water deer and the musk deer. The caribou and reindeer are the only deer in which both the male and female have antlers.

I wonder if bats are truly blind and cannot see in daylight...

No, actually bats are not blind and can see in daylight. Echolocation is word used to describe some bats way of using echoes to sense objects at night. As it files at night, a bat repeatedly makes a noise, and sound waves bounce back. The vibrations go through a bat's ears and the eardrum vibrates sending a message to its brain. The brain then tells the bat where and how far away objects are. So bats actually can see a little in daylight and use "radar" at night.
