I wonder what makes Siamese cats different from other cats...

The main difference is the way they look. All Siamese cats have blue eyes. Some times their eyes are crossed. When they are born, they are white. When they get bigger, they become creamy coloured yellow (or another light colour) and they develop brown, red, or blue spots called points. He points are on their feet, legs, ears, tail and face. Siamese cats come from Thailand, which used to be called Siam. They are very clean. They are like dogs in some ways- they can walk on leash and even fetch. Their voices sound different from other cat's their meows can sounds like human baby.

I wonder why cats like milk...

Some cats like milk because it is good for their bodies, and hey like the taste. Cats also like cream and other dairy products like butter and cottage cheese. Cats also need to drink fresh water, not just ilk. Some people think that cats can get all their nourishment from milk like fish, beef, kidney, heart, and chopped liver. I think this sounds very yucky. Could this be why they like milk so much? Mother cats drink milk to help nurse their kittens. Cats should drink lots at this time. Kitten loves their mother's milk best!
