I wonder why I have a heart...

The heart pumps blood. The blood carries oxygen to the body. If we didn't have a heart, our blood wouldn't move at all and we couldn't live. Our heart is very important.

I wonder why my heart beats...

The heart beats because blood is being pumped through it. Your heart is a muscle and its openings are called valves. Your heart muscle squeezes and relaxes as the blood is pumped through the valves. Each squeeze and relaxation make up one beat of the heart.

I wonder why we blink...

I think we blink because our eyes have been open too long and so we closed them just a little bit and then open them again. When you blink, the water in your eye washes your eye so you can see better. The water in your eye also cleans out the dust in your eye. Your eyes clean because you blink.
